Chapter 1 by Natalya Nugent

The young teenage couple sit in the car. She is silent and stares out the window watching as the damp faith lit city pasted by. Tears were threatening both of them. He gripped the wheel tighter with every turn they made.

Soon enough the city was fading and they were back to suburbs of a small town outside of Philadelphia it didn't even have a name. The teenagers called it hell the adults called it just a place to live for awhile. Most of them moves into the city and had big dreams. But some of them have been there for ages.
